

OLPR Resources on the Web

Readers familiar with the Lawyers Professional Responsibility Board/Office of Lawyers Professional Responsibility (LPRB/OLPR) website (www.mncourts.gov/lprb/index.asp) will recognize that the site contains a wealth of information helpful to Minnesota lawyers. You may also recognize that the current design of the website is not a model of efficiency, organization or viewing ease. Lawyers and non-lawyers alike can find it difficult to take full advantage of all the site has to offer. Outdated features and technological aspects of the site, which make it difficult to update and maintain, compound the problem.

To address these concerns and thereby make the website more user-friendly, the OLPR has undertaken to, in essence, rebuild it. We expect to launch the new website this month, perhaps before but certainly soon after the publication of this article. Designed in a new format, the new site will be easier to view and, we hope, easier to use.

The LPRB/OLPR website contains basic information for all Minnesota lawyers, including:

- searchable full-text versions of the Minnesota Rules of Professional Conduct (the rules which govern lawyer conduct);
- opinions of the Lawyers Professional

TIMOTHY M. BURKE is senior assistant director of the Office of Lawyers Professional Responsibility, where he has served for 17 years. He received his JD from the University of Minnesota Law
School and was admitted to practice in 1988.

Responsibility Board (which clarify or interpret various rules of professional conduct);

- the Minnesota Rules on Lawyers Professional Responsibility (the rules which govern the lawyer discipline system).

Many articles on topics of professional responsibility can also be found on the site. There are the numerous professional responsibility articles that have been published in Bench & Bar over the past nearly 40 years. Most of these articles were written by the director of the OLPR.¹ Some were written by assistant directors or by other practicing lawyers on topics related to professional responsibility. The website also contains all of the ethics articles written by OLPR staff attorneys and published in Minnesota Lawyer (and its companion publication, the formerly independent Finance and Commerce) since October 1997. All of the articles are full-text and searchable.

Although never written to be exhaustive, authoritative treatises, the articles offer substantial information about many professional responsibility topics. Often, these articles can provide the specific answer to a particular professional responsibility issue facing a lawyer. At other times, the articles may be at least a guide toward understanding and for future research.

Particularized Materials

In addition to these general resources, the OLPR website contains more particularized materials. Common inquiries to the OLPR relate to establishing, maintaining, and using trust accounts. The OLPR website thus contains several resources regarding trust accounts, including a list of the required books and records, a list of frequently asked questions (with answers), the OLPR brochure on how to maintain trust accounts with Quicken®, the list of financial institutions approved for holding Minnesota lawyers' trust accounts, and information about the trust-account-overdraft notification program. This information can answer most questions about establishing, maintaining, and operating a trust account. It also provides guidance on the overdraft notification program, under which—in the event a lawyer attempts to make a disbursement from a trust account without sufficient funds in the account to cover the disbursement—the OLPR reviews trust account overdrafts reported by financial institutions.

The website also contains postings on items of current interest, such as when comment is requested on a proposed change to the Minnesota Rules of Professional Conduct or an LPRB Opinion. Current and past annual reports are available. Of vital interest to consumers is the lawyer-search feature that allows searchers to determine whether a particular lawyer's license is active and in good standing and whether she has been publicly disciplined. If the lawyer has been publicly disciplined, links to full copies of the pertinent supreme court opinions or orders are included on the site. The website also contains links to information regarding cross-border practice rules and the requirements to establish and maintain a professional firm.

Minnesota will join a small number of jurisdictions in allowing electronic filing of complaints.

Requests & Complaints

Lawyers can also request advisory opinions through the website. For many years, any Minnesota lawyer has been able to telephone the OLPR and request an advisory opinion regarding a prospective professional responsibility dilemma he faces. The OLPR continues to offer that service. In addition, however, a lawyer may submit an inquiry through the OLPR website,² providing the facts and question to the OLPR as confidential electronic text. A staff attorney will review the issue, call the lawyer, and discuss the problem.

Of potential interest to both lawyers and nonlawyers, the website provides information, directions, and a printable form on which to file a complaint with the OLPR against a lawyer. The new website expands on this feature and for the first time will allow a complaint to be submitted electronically. Previously, while a complaint form could be completed on the website, it had to be printed and then mailed or faxed to the OLPR. No more, as Minnesota will join a small number of jurisdictions in allowing electronic filing of complaints. Most documents will still need to be mailed separately.

Simultaneously with these changes, the Minnesota Client Security Board (CSB) is also updating its website to be more user-friendly. The CSB website includes information about the board, its rules and policies, and the payment of claims by the board to compensate clients who have suffered a loss because of the dishonest conduct of a lawyer (i.e., clients who are victims of theft by their lawyers). The new CSB website will continue to have a list of lawyers against whom claims have been paid. Like the OLPR site, the CSB site offers articles related to the CSB and its annual reports.

The OLPR website has always offered good and reliable information for lawyers dealing with professional responsibility topics.³ That information will remain. Changes in appearance and organization will, we hope, make that information easier to access and use. ▲

Notes

¹ The LPRB and OLPR came into existence in 1971. Almost immediately, the MSBA offered the first director, Richey Reavill, the opportunity to write a monthly column, which he did commencing with the September 1971 issue of Bench & Bar of Minnesota. That tradition has continued to the present day.

² In 2009, the OLPR received 2,282 requests for advisory opinions; of these, 262 were received via the website.

³ The OLPR is improving its technology in other ways as well. For example, the OLPR has begun a pilot program to allow district ethics committee members to communicate electronically with each other using SharePoint. The goal of this project is to allow members of each district ethics committee to share information, questions, and reports of investigations. We hope this will allow the district ethics committees to continue their good work and do it in a more efficient manner.

WHEN PERFORMANCE COUNTS

THE PATRICK J THOMAS AGENCY

SURETY BONDING and INSURANCE

With over 40 years experience PJT has been Minnesota's surety bonding specialist. With the knowledge, experience and guidance law firms expect from a bonding company.

- Supersedeas • Appeals • Certiorari • Replevin •
- Injunction • Restraining Order • Judgment •
- License Bonds • Trust • Personal Representative •
- Conservator • Professional Liability • ERISA • Fidelity •

Locally owned and operated. Same day service with in house authority!

625 Second Avenue South Suite 410, Minneapolis, MN 55402

In St. Paul call (651) 224-3335 or Minneapolis (612) 339-5522

Fax: (612) 349-3657 • email@pjtagency.com • www.pjtagency.com

STAND OUT FROM THE CROWD

Be Among the First Certified Criminal Law Specialists in Minnesota

Only 3% of all registered attorneys in MN stand out as a certified specialists in their field. We invite you to stand out in your practice area.

Now accepting applications for the
CRIMINAL LAW
SPECIALIST EXAMINATION

APRIL 24, 2010

ONE OF THE FIRST NEW
AREAS OF LEGAL CERTIFICATION
IN OVER 20 YEARS!

Minnesota State Bar Association
Certified ▲ Specialist

Criminal Law

MSBA

Contact Jessica Thomas at 612-278-6318
jthomas@mnbar.org | www2.mnbar.org/certify

Diversity Celebration at Mitchell

William Mitchell College of Law has announced intent to celebrate Diversity Week, March 17-26, 2010, with a series of events, some of which are open to the general public.

Among the public events, designed to foster greater understanding of the important role diversity of age, race, gender, and orientation plays in helping law school students develop into successful professionals, are the following:

■ On Monday, March 17, Duchess Harris—an associate professor of American Studies at Macalester College who is also a second-year student at William Mitchell—will speak at the YMCA Midtown on “Black Feminist Politics in the Age of Obama.” The event is scheduled from noon to 1:00 p.m. at 2121 E. Lake Street, Minneapolis. Registration is required and includes lunch. Contact Nicole@wfmn.org

■ The William Mitchell Auditorium will be the venue for Tobias K. Davis’s play, “The Naked I” on Friday March 19 from 7:00 to 9:45 p.m. The play will be followed by a panel discussion designed to educate lawyers about the elimination of bias or prejudice against transgender people. Attendees will receive one elimination-of-bias CLE credit. To register, go to <http://www.wmitchell.edu/news/> and follow links for “The Naked I.”

■ Rowzat Shipchandler, a project manager with the Saint Paul Foundation’s Facing Race Initiative, will be the featured speaker on Wednesday, March 24 from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. at William Mitchell. Shipchandler will present strategies developed by the foundation to foster open discussion of race and racism, the first step in being able to address it in the practice of law and the administration of justice. To register for this CLE event, go to <http://www.wmitchell.edu/news/> and follow links for Diversity Week events.

Trade Secrets Symposium

“The Evolution of Trade Secret Law: Reflecting on 30 Years of the Uniform Trade Secrets Act,” is the topic of a symposium to be offered at Hamline University School of Law on April 16.

Open to the public, this symposium will celebrate the 30th anniversary of the adoption of the Uniform Trade Secrets Act by exploring its history, purpose, and significance. Trade secret scholars from around the country will be present to assess the meaning, impact, and future of the act and to discuss how it is applied both domestically and internationally.

Minnesota became the first state to adopt the Uniform Trade Secrets Act in August 1980, with the new law going into effect in Minnesota and several other states in January 1981. Since then, 45 states have adopted it, making it the predominant law governing trade secrets in the United States.

The all-day event will take place in the Klas Center, located at 1535 Taylor Avenue on Hamline University’s St. Paul campus. Application is being made for 6.5 CLE credits.

Register by contacting Deb Lange at (651) 523-2122 or dlange@hamline.edu. For more information, please visit: www.law.hamline.edu/hamline-law-review.

Duff Joins U of M Law Faculty

The University of Minnesota Law School in February announced that Antony Duff, a distinguished theorist in criminal law and punishment, will join the faculty as a tenured professor beginning in the fall semester 2010.

Duff’s work in criminal law theory is widely recognized as having catalyzed renewed interest in the subject. He is also an eminent modern scholar in punishment theory and philosophy.

“I am extremely pleased that Antony has accepted our offer to join the law school faculty this fall,” said Dean David Wippman. “He is one of the world’s most important philosophers of criminal law The addition of his energy, visibility, and creativity promise to make the University of Minnesota Law School a world leader in criminal law and many related subjects.”

Duff will come to Minnesota from the Department of Philosophy, University of Stirling, Scotland. In Britain, he recently organized and led a three-year interdisciplinary project that examined the nature, function, and normative underpinnings of the criminal trial.

Islamic Law & Constitutional Liberty

The University of St. Thomas Law School on April 12 will host its spring law journal symposium devoted to exploring the intersection of constitutional liberty and Islamic law.

The event will be held in the Schulze Grand Atrium at the School of Law in downtown Minneapolis.

Panelists are expected to discuss a range of topics related to two broad themes: First, what challenges and opportunities face democracies in Muslim-majority nations as they seek to integrate Islamic law with the rights typically accorded in constitutional democracies? Second, what tensions exist between adherence to Islamic law and the norms of liberal democracies in nations with growing Muslim minorities? Within this framework, participants will discuss Islam and religious liberties; privatization of law issues—such as those being considered in Canada—and notions of patriotism, assimilation, and pluralism as they pertain to Islam. They will also explore the unique features of Islamic law and its integration into modern legal systems.

The keynote speaker for the symposium will be Noah Feldmann, adjunct senior fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations and professor at Harvard Law School. Other presenters will include distinguished scholars in law, Islam, and anthropology whose research addresses issues in constitutional law, Islamic law, Islamic banking, human rights, and comparative social studies, among others.

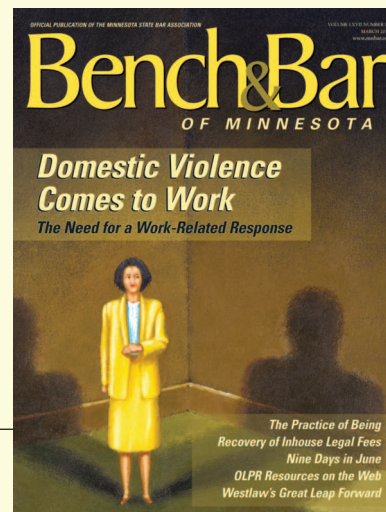

Practicing lawyers, legal scholars, and the public are all encouraged to register for this event. CLE credits are being applied for. For more information and registration information contact: Bethany Moeller at (651) 962-4830 or RSVP at www.stthomas.edu/law/rsvp.

Advertiser Index

The easy way to query our valued advertisers
Please thank them by sending them your business!

Display Ads:
Pierre Productions
& Promotions
(952) 903-0505

Classified Ads:
visit www.mnbar.org

A
Allodium Investment Consultants	37
Audiology Concepts, Inc	5
B
Best & Flanagan, LLP	37
Borene Law Firm, PA	47
C
1031 Commercial Partners Exchange Company, LLC	37
Cottrell Law Firm, PA	19
E
Erickson, Bell, Beckman & Quinn	45
Eide Bailly	7
F
Frankman, Leland J.	49
First American Exchange Co.....	41
G
Gilbert Mediation Center, Ltd	47
Government Liaison Services	49
Gregerson Rosow Johnson & Nilan, Ltd	41
K
Kline, Andrew E.	37

L
Landex Research, Inc	41
Law Firm Merchant Account	8
Law Library Consultants	19
Legal Aid Society	43
Livgard & Lloyd, PLLP	39
M
Merchant & Gould, PC — Tony Zeuli.....	45
Metro Legal Services	39
Minnesota Continuing Legal Education	Third Cover
Minnesota Lawyers Mutual Insurance Co	8
Minnesota Paralegal Institute	8
MSBA ADR Section	43
MSBA Certified Specialist	15
MSBA Civil Litigation Section	19
P
Patrick J. Thomas Agency	15
Peterson Engineering, Inc	11
S
Schwebel, Goetz & Sieben, PA.....	1
Schechter Dokken Kanter	11
Special Counsel	2
T
Thomson Reuters.....	Back Cover
U
University of Minnesota Law School	Second Cover